ALIEN project summary

Advanced Learning and Inclusive Environment (ALIEN) for Higher Education through greater knowledge and understanding of migration processes

The project aims at contributing to greater equity and social cohesion within Europe, through a series of knowledge-exchange activities with diverse stakeholders (academics, national and local authorities, migrant community organisations) and through the understanding of complexities of migration flows.

Given the critical context of the current refugee crisis in Europe the projects objectives are:

- To advance young people inter-cultural competences, knowledge and understandings of migration through transnational, multi and interdisciplinary collaboration of academic staff, migrant organizations and postgraduate students.

- To develop engagement of Higher Educational Institutions (HEIs) with local and international migrant organizations as well as regional authorities to build bridges and share knowledge, good practices and raise awareness of issues around migration.

Through:

- Innovative education methods focusing on migration issues from the perspective of particular social science discipline including Economics, Education, Politics/ Sociology/Social Policy and Social Work.

- A Community of Practice, created around open access virtual platform (i.e. e-modules, examples of teaching activities and assessment strategy) for use and

- Handbooks of education methodologies and scenarios for workshops materials for direct use in the teaching curriculum.

Living Labs will work as interactive think tanks, where issues & opinions of public concern related to migration will be discussed.

Living labs will serve as an input for the projects' learning materials and thus they will operate as the meeting point of the diverse stakeholders of the project and they will involve interchange of ideas, methodology forming and collection of data.

The project involves partnership institutions based in Poland (Polish Japanese Academy of Information Technology, Warsaw School of Economics), UK (Glyndwr University and University of the West of Scotland), Finland (Aalto University) and Greece (Technopolis – City of Athens).

The Ministry of the Interior (Polish: Ministerstwo Spraw Wewnętrznych, MSW) is an administrative structure responsible for internal security, law enforcement, civil defence and registry functions in Poland. The current ministry was formed on 18 November 2011, when after the parliamentary election of 9 October 2011 there was a call to restructure the then Ministry of Interior and Administration, from which it was split. In late 2015 it was folded back to Ministry of Interior and Administration.

Polish Office for Foreigners

<https://www.mazowieckie.pl/en/for-foreigners-1/518,For-Foreigners.html>

The Office for Foreigners was established to provide comprehensive and professional service in the scope of legalization of stay and granting protection to foreigners staying in the territory of the Republic of Poland. In a friendly and honest manner shares knowledge on the issues concerning foreigners, raising public awareness of Polish citizens and popularizing attitude that co-existence of several small countries in a one country is possible. It strengthens self-image by performing its mission in a manner devoid of political influences with the participation of highly skilled employees.

Praktycy Kultury

<http://www.praktycy.org/>

Stowarzyszenie Praktyków Kultury (SPK) – is an association comprised of artists active in the field of „live” culture. “Live” meaning that everyone is allowed to benefit from it and everyone is allowed to contribute. According to the association art can't exist without life, it should be put in to practice instead of being researched.

SPK organises performance art projects in the spirit of public awareness and collaborates with institutions from diverse fields. The association exists since 2006 and has been awarded many times. Their target are social groups in vulnerable positions

We decided to focus on how:

Migrants access to labour market in particular countries in the European Union

Comparison of data between Athens and Warsaw that impact access to the labour market and integration empowerment of women - equality in the labour market; establishing immigration law - legal status of migrants and refugees as a factor of gaining access to the labour market;

housing and accommodation;
recognising university degrees - skills;
language - means of communication integration

Taking into consideration the massive amount of data and the interesting way information is depicted in pictures (2), (3) we decided to create infographics depicting the different situations in both countries, aiming to raise aknowledge about labour market and migrants.

Mind map about the definition of labour market and the issues that labour market is connected with.

Building on what we have worked on in Athens and thinking of the visual implications of the effect of media we realized that people aren't actually aware of the percentage of HATE happening around Europe toward the immigrants.

phase 01

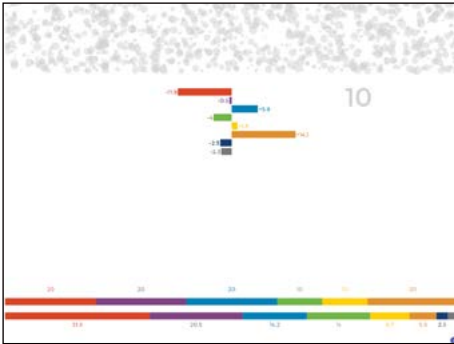

Conducting a research and gathering data, we will be asking these important questions:

Have you actually met an immigrant
How do you get information about immigrants
How do immigrants look like?
Have you ever heard anything positive? If no, are you basing your information on things from the news.

phase 02

Once this data gathering, we will create a website that is built on a narrative and show how media had the bigger impact in creating this useless hate.

Example of the website that is described in phase 02.

Mass media effects on global perception of migration.

Also possible execution idea:

- Posters spread around the cities (showing how the media affected this hate)
- Positive immigration newspaper next to stands (make it really stand out)

Integration or Co-living?

During the study visits, the main point we spotted was the fact that many immigrants prefer coliving than integrating.

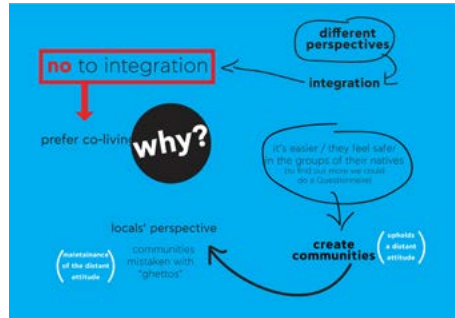

It's easier/
They feel safer in the groups of their natives creation of a questionnaire in order to find out more.

so

they create communities

mindmap of the team during the presentation of their ideas.

but

Locals mistake immigrant communities with "ghettos"

maintenance of the distant attitude

What

inform each side about the DIVERSITY of the cultures

Who

locals and foreigners

Why

not wanting to integrate is their right wanting to co-live is their right lets make this a bit easier
